QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Questions were submitted to ALCOSAN. The responses are hereby incorporated into the RFQ and are as follows:

1. Re: D “Firms experience” We have done many large scale projects all over the world but typically don’t share project details for proprietary reasons in this part of the process. If we qualify to the next part of the bid we can share those details. If we leave that part out will we be disqualified from bidding?
 - a. Yes, your firm will be disqualified. You do not need to give specific information. “Confidential Client” is acceptable. However, you should give a description of projects that show your firm has conducted this type of training for similar entities within the United States.
 - b. Please note these proposals are considered confidential and are not shared with anyone who does not have a need to know. You may also put a legend on those specific pages that the information contained is corporate confidential.
